REPEAT "DIE WALKUERE" VISITORS TOTAL 696,024

"Die Walkuere" was sung at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening. The occasion was made interesting by the first appearance here of Maud Fav. an American soprano, who has made most of her career in Germany and has had particularly large favor in Munich. She came before her first New York audience as the unfortunate Sieglinde. The role has had some notable representaives here, including Lilli Lehmann, Milka Ternina and Olive Fremstad. Miss Fay's impersonation did not seem ikely to obliterate memories of these, but perhaps it need not cause memories beyond a repetition of the names.

Miss Fay has much in her favor. Her stage presence is prepossessing. She is all and has a handsome and expressive countenance. She has a good command of stage routine and is, furthermore, a good operatic actress. Some of her stage business, particularly that accompanying Siegmund's withdrawal of the sword from the tree, recalled Berta Morena, but she is a good model. Of course, Miss Fay could not offer a new interpretation of her role, but she gave one which had beauty of movement and demand for the tree, recalled Berta

The annual report shows that the administration of the museum cost $407,257.04 in 1915, of which the city contributed $200,000, and 696,024 persons were dramatic temperament.

Miss Fay's voice may have been one of much beauty; it may be so now; but no large resource of tone or breath was revealed last night. It is altogether probable, if not quite certain, that she was not in full possession of her powers last night. Her voice was lacking in point and resonance, but perhaps this may not be the case when she sings again. Her style was in accordance with the best German traditions—and in spots with the worst.

Mme. Gadski as Bruennhilde, Mme. Homer as Fricks, Mr. Sembach as Sirgtomer as Fricks, and as Wotan and Mr. swad, Mr. Braun as Wotan and Mr. Ruysdael as Hunding were the other members of the cast. All of these singers have been heard in the same roles before and it seems needless to make comment showed a falling off owing to the European war. American art was represented by nineteen paintings and two have been heard in the same roles before and it seems needless to make comment such as might be expected under his direction. That distinctness which was so dear to Wagner's heart and which is obliterated by some extravagantly tem-peramental conductors was never absent.
